Supporting the leadership and sovereignty of indigenous nations and tribal peoples, whose lands we all occupy and exploit, is critical to the success of the climate movement. To do this, we must work to heal from the effects of all past and current policies aimed at the destruction of indigenous peoples and the stealing of their resources.

Join us to:

- ★ Examine the effects of historic and current genocidal policies
- ★ Learn to respect Indigenous leadership styles.
- ★ Question our cultural worldviews that are based in dominance and exploitation.
- ★ Learn the approaches used by Sustaining All Life and United to End Racism to heal from the damage of genocide and oppression, increase our effectiveness in the climate justice movement, and prevent burnout.

OF SAL
& UER

It is possible to limit the effects of human-caused climate change and restore the environment, but some very large changes in our economy and the lives we live are needed for this to happen.

Sustaining All Life (SAL) and United to End Racism (UER) believe the environmental crisis cannot be resolved without ending racism, genocide toward Indigenous peoples, classism, sexism, and other oppressions.

We believe that the barriers to building a large and powerful movement sufficient to make the needed changes include (1) longstanding divisions (caused by oppression, and especially racism and classism) between nations and between groups of people, (2) widespread feelings of discouragement and powerlessness, (3) denial of or failure to engage with the escalating damage to the earth's climate, and (4) difficulties in effectively addressing the connections between the environmental crisis and the failures of our economic system.

The mental and emotional harm done to us by oppression and other hurtful experiences interferes with our ability to think clearly and sets groups of people against each other. In SAL and UER we have learned that it is possible to free ourselves from these hurts and address barriers to effective organizing. By taking turns listening to each other and encouraging emotional release, people can heal from the mental and emotional harm and become better able to think, speak out, and organize and lead others in building a sustainable world. SAL and UER are projects of and use the tools of Re-evaluation Counseling, which currently exists in 95 countries.
